>> Best practices & solutions from purchasing perspective

Founded in 1954, the German Association of Materials Management, Purchasing and Logistics (Bundesverband Materialwirtschaft, Einkauf und Logistik e.V. - BME) is a leading trade association and network partner for purchasing, supply chain and logistics managers in Germany and Europe. It has 9,750 members - from individual companies to medium-sized enterprises to corporate groups - from all sectors. The volume of goods and services procured by the association's members amounts to around 1.25 billion euros annually. This corresponds to just under one third of Germany's gross domestic product.

The association's objectives are the transfer of know-how through the exchange of experience, the training and further education of qualified specialists and managers, and the promotion of innovations, new processes and techniques at the interface between theory and practice.
